Credentialing BASICS is a great course for those new to credentialing in hospitals, health centers, and office groups. It also is a great review for those who've been credentialing for a while or have been away and coming back, plus anyone studying for certification who want a review of hospital BASICS.

At the completion of Credentialing BASICS you will be able to:

1. Define what credentialing is and why we do it
2. Describe the steps involved in credentialing and privileging of healthcare practitioners including primary source verification
3. Reference the accreditation standards and federal/state regulations related to credentialing and privileging
4. Explain the initial and on-going evaluation of practitioners to monitor the care they are giving
5. Define "negligent credentialing" and some of the related legal cases and how to avoid this happening in your organization
